

2022 Hall of Fame induction

May 10, 2022

Ken Galvin

For over two decades, Ken Galvin has shared his encyclopedic knowledge of rock & roll with the WVUD audience via the Classic Rock Café. Despite the genre not changing much over time, Ken has managed to keep his show fresh with deep tracks, obscure bands, in-depth knowledge of the artists, and interesting anecdotes. It is evident that a lot of work goes into this weekly program.

What is not evident to most listeners and what continues to amaze those who know is that Ken is legally blind. Ken had to work incredibly hard to become a DJ at WVUD and to prep each show.

Ken Galvin

His ability to manage all the complex equipment despite his vision loss is amazing. Ken is truly inspirational and is a testament to working hard to achieve your goals regardless of obstacles that may be in the way.

Ken exudes WVUD and Blue Hen pride. He supports many of our shows on-air and is always ready to call with a friendly complement or just to say that he is listening. Ken is a wonderful teammate and a treasure of knowledge. We welcome Ken Galvin into the WVUD Hall of Fame.

Pat Goodhope

Pat came to WVUD in the late 90s but had long before established himself as a radio pro. Pat's career began at age 18 in South Dakota and took him around the dial before eventually landing him in Delaware (literally, by way of Dover AFB) in 1985. Stints at WDOV, WDSD, and eventually WJBR AM as well as work in adjacent entertainment fields are a part of a diverse resumé.

Best known as an Avenue C jazz host at WVUD, Pat has also served as part of our Sunday night old time music programming. He is well known for his expertise in multiple musical genres and an encyclopedic knowledge of all things Sinatra. Additionally, he has volunteered his time at numerous station appearances over the years.

Pat Goodhope

Rarely missing a show over the decades (unless his beloved Red Sox were in the playoffs), Pat has been a dependable and versatile contributor to WVUD. We look forward to his continued work at the station and are pleased to induct him into our Hall of Fame.

Roger Holmes

From early on, Roger Holmes was a communicator. Dating back to his time in the Army Signal Corps and extending to his help in getting Temple's WRTI on the air, it has always been apparent that Roger was an expert at connecting with people. This trait carried him through a career spanning 6+ decades in radio.

Over the years, Roger's talents as a communicator were on display on local commercial radio stalwarts such as WIP, WNRK, WDEL, and WAMS. His commercial career spanned musical careers ranging from Sinatra to The Beatles and beyond.

Roger Holmes

While his WVUD career may have seemed like a footnote or a blip, Roger spent over a decade and a half hosting 'In A Mist'. It was at this last stop in his radio career that he was finally able to share his talents beyond the local area with the help of the world wide web.

Roger dedicated a large amount of his life to the music and to entertaining his listeners. Always the consummate professional on the air and the kindest gentleman off the air, it is an honor to recognize Roger for his dedication to WVUD and to the entire local radio community.

Tom 'Mac Thomas' McElhone

Tom McElhone (a.k.a. Mac Thomas) was a fixture on Java Time and the public affairs block with his Let's Go Cruisin' program. He was also a frequent fill-in on other shows and even served as a sports producer at a time when student interest had waned. He truly was a versatile performer who lent his energy and voice to many things within the radio station.

A mentor to students, a friend to fellow DJs, and an ambassador for the station at various car shows, Tom left an indelible imprint on the station. He even (unknowingly) became a pioneer for the technology that kept WVUD afloat during COVID. He was our first fully remote DJ, expertly piping in shows each week from Ohio after he left this area.

Tom 'Mac Thomas' McElhone

Regardless of whether it was a radio show or a station promo, Tom had the innate ability to always leave his listeners with a smile. He did this each and every week, through multiple health issues...even recording a show the week of his untimely passing. Mac Thomas was truly a dedicated WVUD icon and deserves his spot in our Hall of Fame.
